Building More Accessible Communities

Disability advocates from local groups including The Ability Center, The Fair Housing Center, Toledo Lucas County Commission on Disabilities, and Community Advocates for Transportation Rights (CATR) announced a new TARTA bus stop at Franklin Park Mall.

This achievement is a culmination of several years of grassroots advocacy efforts to improve accessibility for people living with disabilities, ensuring patrons will now have a direct and safer walking path to the entrance of the building.

Jo Rita Fox, member of Community Advocates for Transportation Rights

With assistance from Advocates for Basic Legal Equality (ABLE), The Fair Housing Center and the Lucas Metropolitan Housing Authority (LMHA) announced a joint effort to improve the accessibility of public housing programs and services for people with disabilities. A three-year agreement paves the way for LMHA residents to request and obtain reasonable accommodations and modifications in a timely and efficient manner. A cooperative relationship between the organizations, including regular meetings and trainings, will result in quicker complaint resolution and ensure LMHA residents with disabilities can secure accessible living conditions.
Local Builder Accused of Negligence

A joint lawsuit filed by The Fair Housing Center, The Ability Center, and resident Jenny Tillman alleges that Brooklynn Park Villas, a 55+ housing community in Toledo, was falsely marketed as accessible but exhibits glaring violations of The Fair Housing Act. Moline Builders, Inc., JLJ Development, Inc., Larry L. Fast, and James Moline are accused of discriminating against persons with disabilities by failing to comply with federal design and construction regulations for accessible housing, even after being fully informed of their lack of compliance. Examples of violations include entrances with steps; walkways that are impassable due to steep slopes or lack of curb cuts; environmental controls, mailboxes, and other amenities located out of reach; and kitchens and bathrooms that do not provide sufficient clear floor space to be usable by persons with disabilities.

Bank of America Charged with Neglect of Foreclosures

The Fair Housing Center joined the National Fair Housing Alliance, 18 other fair housing organizations, and two homeowners in Maryland to file a federal lawsuit against Bank of America and Safeguard, alleging failure to provide routine exterior maintenance and marketing for bank-owned homes in African-American and Latino neighborhoods, while consistently maintaining similar homes in comparable white neighborhoods. In neighborhoods of color, evidence shows wildly overgrown grass and weeds, unsecured doors and windows, damaged steps and handrails, accumulated trash and debris, unsecured pools, graffiti, and even dead animals decaying in yards. Meanwhile, homes in predominantly white neighborhoods are far more likely to have the lawns mowed and edged regularly, invasive weeds and vines removed, windows and doors secured or repaired, debris and trash removed, leaves raked, and graffiti erased from the property.

Congress Passes Civil Rights Act of 1866
In partnership with the Ohio Diversity Council, The Fair Housing Center hosted a state-wide summit to commemorate the 50th anniversary of The Fair Housing Act. Drawing stakeholders across Ohio, the event provided a special opportunity to examine the persistent barriers to equal opportunity and share solutions for creating more diverse, vibrant communities.

The all-day summit featured keynote speaker Richard Rothstein, author of “The Color of Law: A Forgotten History of How our Government Segregated America.” His presentation explained how segregated neighborhoods and racial disparities did not happen by accident, but are the result of deliberate government policies that continue to have a detrimental impact decades later and must be proactively addressed in order to create more equitable living conditions. Other notable presenters and panelists included Dr. Terrell Strayhorn, Professor & Founder/CEO of Do Good Work Educational Consulting LLC; Lisa Rice, President and CEO of the National Fair Housing Alliance; Stephen Dane, Partner at Relman, Dane & Colfax PLLC; and Michael Marsh, President and CEO of The Fair Housing Center in Toledo.

The event concluded with the launch of a state-wide initiative called Welcome In My BackYard, or WIMBY, a grassroots movement to foster more welcoming communities, raise awareness of diversity and inclusion, and encourage people to speak out against acts of intolerance. Attendees were invited to take the WIMBY pledge and received signage to help spread the WIMBY message across the state. Find out more or take the WIMBY pledge at wimbyohio.org.

Establishes broad definition of standing
This year we commemorate the 50th anniversary of the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and the subsequent passing of the Fair Housing Act. The Civil Rights movement of the 1960s raised national awareness of social injustices and demanded government action to establish fair and equal treatment as a basic right for all. The Fair Housing Act was the last and most difficult piece of civil rights legislation to pass, facing both public and Congressional resistance. Dr. King’s assassination on April 4, 1968 sparked a national uprising, and protests across the country compelled Congress to pass the Fair Housing Act one week later, on April 11, 1968.

Prior to the Fair Housing Act, discriminatory practices sanctioned by the federal government prevented families of color from becoming homeowners, resulting in racially segregated, distressed urban neighborhoods. Decades later, the impact of this disinvestment is apparent in the vast disparities in wealth, rates of homeownership, quality of education, health outcomes, and access to vital resources.

Fair housing laws were passed to protect people from these unfair practices, ensuring everyone is treated equally when renting, purchasing, insuring, or financing the home they choose. It is unlawful for housing providers to deny housing or apply differential treatment to someone because of their race, color, national origin, religion, gender, familial status, and disability. Many states and municipalities recognize additional protected classes.

Fifty years later, housing discrimination is not history. While overt acts of discrimination are not as common, implicit bias and restrictive policies continue to serve as barriers to accessing homeownership and neighborhoods of opportunity. Homeownership rates for African Americans and Latinos remain far below the rates for white households, contributing to the racial wealth gap. Eligibility criteria for mortgage lending can often prohibit home purchases within neighborhoods of color or for borrowers of color. Even on the local level, exclusionary zoning policies can prevent the development of affordable housing.

The 50th anniversary of the Fair Housing Act is an opportunity to recognize the barriers that persist in our own communities, and work together to overcome them. We invite you to join us in creating truly inclusive communities, where the American Dream is within reach for every person, in every neighborhood.
For the fourth year in a row, guests followed the yellow brick road to the happiest of happy hours! Wearing red shoes in honor of the evening’s theme, attendees enjoyed music, raffles, and auction items, showing their support for keeping housing fair and attainable in our community. This year’s event featured a live sculpture creation by artist Dane Turpening, giving guests a special opportunity to watch “Keys to Opportunity” take shape!

20,000 Keys to Opportunity

Nearly 20,000 old keys donated from people across the community were fused together to create a new outdoor sculpture, unveiled during our annual Courtyard Connections event! We kicked off our Community Key Collection during ProMedica Foundations’ “I’m In” event for young professionals, collecting more than 7,500 keys from attendees who learned about how housing affects our health and well-being. Installed in our Courtyard of Justice, the unique “Keys to Opportunity” sculpture will represent the role fair housing plays in opening the door to the vital resources that enable us to thrive.

First case to hold that sexual harassment violates the Fair Housing Act
Imagine you were denied housing because you were injured while serving our country, and you now rely on a service animal for assistance. Imagine that you were denied a home loan or homeowners insurance because of the neighborhood where you want to live. Imagine working and saving money for the sake of moving into a neighborhood that offers greater opportunities for your children only to be harassed and mistreated. It happens every day in our community. Without our vigilance, it would continue to persist.

Your support helps our friends and neighbors by protecting their right to live where they choose. Research has shown that where you live is more important than your genetic code, which means fair housing plays a crucial role in stabilizing our neighborhoods, fostering diversity, and improving life outcomes.

Your commitment to our mission is critical to our community. Together, we can ensure the door to opportunity is open to all, building a stronger, healthier community.

“I’m not leaving fair housing. I’m taking it with me.”

The Board of Directors of The Fair Housing Center announced the departure of longtime President and CEO, Michael Marsh, who began his new career as President and CEO at Responsive Caregivers of Hawaii on August 1, 2018.

Regarded as a civil rights champion, Mr. Marsh has been with The Fair Housing Center for more than 20 years. Two of the organization’s largest settlements have occurred under his leadership, resulting in the reinvestment of more than $5 million in the urban core to revitalize and support homeownership in Toledo’s underserved neighborhoods.

“The Fair Housing Center has served as a national leader in expanding opportunity. I’m proud to have been a part of that, and confident the organization will continue to play a critical role in our community long after my departure,” said Mr. Marsh.
